NOTE: Priority will be given to individuals who are able to attend both weeks of the intensive. However, exceptions are made on a case by case basis. Applicants wanting an early decision on their application is also possible.

Established in January of 2001 by a small group of visionary artists and experienced educators, the School for Improvisational Music (SIM) offers a continuing series of apprenticeship-style experiences for emerging improvisers.

Open to all ages, levels and styles, SIM's innovative and intensive workshops feature week-long sessions carefully planned but informally structured to facilitate a healthy, stimulating atmosphere for creative musical exploration.

Modeled after the relaxed settings in which improvising musicians typically collaborate, SIM's flexible environment enables students both to focus intensely and to interact freely with top professionals drawn from New York City's jazz and creative music circles.

SIM is a project of the Center for Improvisational Music, a 501(c)(3), tax-exempt organization. © 2001 Center For Improvisational Music. All rights reserved.

SIM admits students of any race, color, gender, sexual orientation, national and ethnic origin to all the rights, privileges, programs, and activities generally accorded or made available to students at the school.
